Introduction

The position of clerk is one of the oldest and most common in local government. The office can be traced back as far as ancient Greece and the title "clerk" developed during the early middle ages when churches regulated many local government matters and only clergymen were educated and could write. The idea of a clerk as a writer, keeper of records and local official evolves from this history.

In America, the early settlers were well aware of the importance of keeping accurate written records of their agreements and actions and so the position of the town clerk was one of the earliest offices established in colonial towns. The office has continued to this day as an essential municipal post and every city, town and village, regardless of size or form of government, has a clerk or equivalent position.

William B. Munro, an eminent political scientist, writing in one of the first textbooks on municipal administration (1934), stated that "no other office in municipal service has so many contacts. It serves the mayor, the city council, the city manager, and all administrative departments without exception. All of them call upon it, almost daily, for some service or information. Its work is not spectacular, but it demands versatility, alertness, accuracy, and no end of patience. The public does not realize how many loose ends of city administration this office pulls together."

In Key Biscayne, the Office of the Village Clerk is established by Section 3.04 of the Village Charter. The charter states that "the Village Council shall appoint a Village Clerk. The clerk shall give notice of Village Council meetings to its members and the public, shall keep a journal of its proceedings which shall be a public record and shall perform such other duties as the Village Council may prescribe from time to time. The clerk shall report to the Village Council."

VILLAGE SEAL DESCRIPTION ADOPTED BY THE VILLAGE COUNCIL
ON AUGUST 10, 1993

One of the oldest and most recognizable landmarks in South Florida, the Cape Florida Lighthouse was first constructed in 1825. It has a colorful, well-documented history. It stands in the Bill Baggs Cape Florida State Recreation Area. Like all lighthouses, it is a symbol of familiar homecoming to sailors, fishermen and landlubbers alike. It also represents man-made structures of lasting quality, strength and safety in an uncertain world.

The coconut palm, threatened by disease in Florida in recent years, has been a popular symbol of peaceful nature for many tropical areas around the world. Key Biscayne was once a plantation of this versatile tree.

The two sea birds, against the backdrop of the moon, stand for the animals with whom we share our environment.

The sun, sustainer of life, is depicted as just having set. The image evokes a universal human reaction -- a powerful, visual reminder of the potential beauty and transitory nature of all things.

The moon is shown on the seal -- not only for its magical qualities -- but also because it is understood that one of the earliest local Indian dialects contained a word-picture-phrase, "Bischiyano," meaning "Favorite Path of the Rising Moon".
